MONTHLY report - 2024 OCTOBER (made on: 10/31/2024)

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In Switzerland, inflation continued to decline in October, with prices rising by only 0.6% compared to the previous year, falling short of market expectations. On a monthly basis, a 0.1% decrease in prices was measured, mainly driven by lower hotel and fuel prices. A December rate cut by the Swiss National Bank had already been anticipated, but now there is a possibility that they may reduce the Swiss base rate by more than 25 basis points. However, with Donald Trump's potential return to power, the likelihood increases that Switzerland could be the first to re-enter negative interest rates territory. During October, economic activity has worsened, as the KOF Swiss Economic Institute's economic barometer dropped to 99.5 points from last month's 104.5, marking the first time this year the indicator fell below 100. Manufacturing companies, especially those in the industrial and construction sectors, are under pressure. On the demand side, however, opposite movements can be observed. During the month, short-term bond yields continued to fall, with a 12 basis point decrease on the 1-year maturity and a 3 basis point decrease on the 3-year maturity.
