

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

The purpose of the investment fund is to create an equity fund that can profit from long-term demographic changes and the related changes in consumer habits. The Fund aims to achieve long-term capital growth by investing in global companies that can benefit from the growth and aging of the population, the social and economic changes associated with a healthy lifestyle, urbanisation, the expansion of the emerging markets' middle class and the global economic trends stemming from these social changes, as well as the changing consumption habits driven by such demographic changes.

The Fund aims to achieve its objectives through equity-type instruments, primarily exchange-traded funds (ETFs), equities and open-ended public investment funds. The Fund takes a forward-looking approach and actively seeks companies in industries that can benefit from the long-term global demographic changes and related changes in consumer habits. Investments are made in companies that have strong fundamentals and are well positioned for long-term value creation and competitive advantage due to demographic and social changes. Trends related to demographic and social changes are long-term processes that go beyond normal economic cycles and are generally global and affect the entire world. Consequently, the Fund is not subject to any geographical restrictions. Since the Fund aims to profit from long-term growth and has significant exposure to the equity market, we recommend the Fund to investors who want to invest in the longer term and have a relatively high willingness to take risk.

MARKET SUMMARY

The result of the US presidential election was the main event that moved markets in November. Trump's victory can be explained, among other things, by the poor economic performance perceived by voters, who said that inflation and economic growth were the most important factors in their vote. This is interesting because the US economy is expanding at a steady 2.7% year-on-year rate, and inflation (2.6%) and unemployment are at low levels. Trump's election triggered a stock market rally on expectations of a looser regulatory environment and other business support measures. Bond yields reacted with a sharp rise on expected proposals by the President-elect to increase the public deficit, but this receded during the month. In general, markets have seen high volatility, driven by Trump's protectionist tariff policy plan and general policy uncertainties. The Fed's 25bp rate cut was in line with expectations, with analysts expecting a further rate cut by the end of the year. Economic growth in Europe remains relatively weak, but inflation is stabilizing at low levels. The US presidential election and Trump's draft tariff policy have had a negative impact on growth prospects in Europe, especially in the automotive sector. The Fund performed well last month. At the beginning of November, a smoother-than-expected Republican victory led investors to buy US equities vigorously. In particular, sectors benefiting from deregulation, an improved economic growth outlook and higher inflation expectations performed well, setting new records for index levels. Overall, the US equity market has never reacted to an election result with such a strong rise. The expected tax cuts could benefit small cap stocks and consumer cyclicals the most, and we have increased our portfolio exposure in this direction. In terms of the Fund's investment universe, the financial sector continued its good performance, while our investments in the healthcare and consumer staples sectors took a hit. On the one hand, the rotation towards more defensive sectors has started after the elections, and on the other hand, Trump's nomination of Robert F. Kennedy Jr. as US Secretary of Health and Human Services could pose new challenges for the sector. Kennedy is a known vaccine sceptic and has promised to take action against 'Big Pharma' - the large multinational pharmaceutical companies. In contrast, one of the Fund's biggest exposures, the world's largest retailer Walmart, has performed well, expecting a stronger Christmas season than ever before, with sales growth of 4.8-5.1 percent.
