MARKET SUMMARY

Equity markets were dragged down in the second half of February as tensions in the Middle East spread to additional countries. Libya, the first substantial crude producer involved in the unrest, has been the market's main concern with massive clashes unfolding throughout February. The imminent risk of disruption in oil production induced a spike in crude prices, which may eventually pose a threat to the liquidity driven growth, in our view. The energy related companies performed well in our portfolio in sync with the crude prices, while pharma and tech companies were more or less dragged down with the market correction. All in all, the fund outperformed its benchmark YTD.
