MARKET SUMMARY:

The January rally continued on bond markets. Money keeps flowing into EM funds, ECB liquidity measures push down yields of sovereigns and financials, which brought a very good performance throughout the asset class. US macro data is still good, ECB LTRO could help the European recovery. The slowing down of the Chinese economy does not look dramatic and rising oil prices could even be positive for selected EM sovereigns and corporates. Market sentiment in the short term could be derailed by the questionmarks that surround the success of the Greek debt exchange, but it is also time for a correction after a long rally. We cut some risky positions in the fund and tried to reinvest into higher quality assets. Tightening EURHUF basis helps to reach nice HUF yields on lower-yielding FX denominated assets as well. Local exposure is still far from low, so we closely monitor newsflow about IMF/EU negotiations, but valuation is still attractive and the position can cope with some volatility. The fund returned 2,48% in February while the benchmark return was 0,82%.
