MARKET SUMMARY:

The global risk rally came to a halt, weaker PMI figures all over the world and renewed fears about a Chinese hard landing weighed on market sentiment. Still, EM credit markets remained well-bid, although a rise in core rates earlier in March did not help the positive price action to continue. Spreads in the EM space corrected to early March levels, 20-30bps higher than this year's lows mid-March. We reduced some risk this month cutting our exposure in HY and selling our Spanish corporate position amid growth fears/increasing headline risk of Spain. We have a small long EURHUF position to hedge some of our Hungarian exposure as market became gradually weaker on still no constructive news regarding IMF/EU talks. Overall, the fund posted a good performance in March, beating the benchmark by 0,46%.
