MARKET SUMMARY:

The portfolio keeps on performing well although credit markets could not continue the summer spread tightening in the autumn. After the rally we rather see sideways movements with small volatility, driven by market sentiment. Emerging market bond fund flows slowed somewhat during November but still remain considerable. With the end of the year nearing liquidity got thinner, there are a few new positions opened, which also hit the performance of new issues. Macro news were also mixed, outcome of US elections and the approaching US fiscal cliff weighed on market sentiment, while Spanish and Greek developments were not supportive either. We still wait for better entry points to raise the risk level in the portfolio.
