INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND:

The fund is intended to serve as a stable, moderately low-risk form of investment, and to offer investors higher returns than bank deposits over the medium term. The portfolio elements are selected in accordance with the above principles. To ensure liquidity, the fund primarily aims to hold bonds and discount treasury bills issued by the State Debt Management Centre on behalf of the State of Hungary, as well as bonds issued by the National Bank of Hungary. The fund has a low risk profile, but its portfolio may also contain forint-denominated debt securities issued by banks and corporations, which are expected to yield a higher return than government securities. The fund may also keep its liquid assets in bank deposits. Besides this, the fund may hold a limited proportion of foreign-currency instruments in its portfolio, but only subject to the full hedging of currency risk. Aegon Domestic Bond Fund must hold minimum 80% of its assets in HUF-denominated bonds issued by the members of European Economic Area.

MARKET SUMMARY:

In January local yields were driven higher on the back of the weak currency, the yield curve bear flattened. Several EM currencies were under pressure for a while, although the market punished the currencies of countries with weak C/A balances (TRY, ZAR). Depreciation of the TRY forced the central bank to surrender and hike rates significantly to stabilise the currency. FX weakness then spread to countries with better fundamentals as well. The HUF and even the PLN started to fall quickly at the end of January which was followed by a rise in short rates. Local situation looked very explosive with EURHUF above 315, 2-year swap above 4% and short FRAs pricing 100 basis points of hikes. Central bank governor's comments did not help, who instead of calming down markets continued to speak about potential to cut rates further. Short rates were up 100-120 bps, the long end came higher by 40-50 bps in January.
