MARKET SUMMARY:

August brought the first meaningful equity market correction in four years. The trigger was the change in Chinese fx policy which highlighted some of the vulnerabilities of the Chinese economy and its potential effects on emerging market growth in general. The global economy is slowing down driven by emerging markets, which are going through their first endogenous (that is not externally-driven) slowdown in twenty years. While slowdown does not equal recession, EM equities and currencies underperformed their developed market counterparts. The fund had a neutral equity exposure through long DM equities and ETFs hedged by MSCI EM shorts.
