MARKET SUMMARY:

After an eventful autumn equity markets were rather calm in December, eking out small gains in most indices. However, junk bonds went to new lows indicating further stress on the financial complex. Oil fell further in December, just like emerging market currencies, which closed the third consecutive negative year. Despite the relative calm, December sent a clear warning sign as commodities and junk bonds all closed at multi-year lows.

The fund was only mildly positioned in December. It was neutral in equities, being long in Hungarian equities against Japanese, Turkish and Spanish index shorts, and entered a little more meaningful long USDCNH in the middle of the month.
