MARKET SUMMARY:

Polish government bonds were range traded in September: yields moved inside a relatively tight range. Money market yields decreased again mostly based on the expected big redemption in local currency in October, while longer papers ended the month a bit higher in terms of YTM.

Polish economic activity data came quite strong, but the bullish set of real data may not prompt the majority of the MPC members to stop communicating no changes until at least the end of 2018. However, with an economy showing signs of reflation, the market will be looking for any hints that the NBP could shift away from its relatively dovish policy stance. With very strong high frequency data GDP growth could reach 4,5% in the third quarter. Nevertheless, as long as inflation remains below target and core inflation shows little signs of demand-pull pressure, the MPC is likely to remain silent and market may be satisfied with unchanged rhetoric.

Local data (high growth, improving budget) are supportive for Polish risk premium, however it will be interesting, how markets participants will deal with returning primary issuance. Cash balances of the government decreased from a yearly high of almost 47 bln PLN to 31 bln PLN at the end of August and there will be a bond redemption worth 14 bln PLN in October. However, Poland has financed 86% of gross borrowing needs at the end of September 2017.

The Ministry of Finance announced that Poland is going to offer 8-16bln PLN of bonds at 2 auctions, plans to hold 3 switch auctions and may sell foreign currency bonds in Q4 after the very silent summer in terms of issuance.
