MARKET SUMMARY

October saw major changes in the Polish bond market. Right at the beginning of the month, the central bank raised the interest rates by 40 basis points, which took the market by surprise both in terms of timing and size of increase. The hike was mainly driven by the heightened risks surrounding the path of the inflation, partly due to political pressure. The economic activity would have warranted the tightening a long time ago, but communication of NBP was reluctant to tighten before spring of 2022, at least according to previous statements. The sell-off continued throughout the month, with short yields mainly driven by the prospect of further rate hikes and long yields rising on inflation fears and because of the international environment. Yields thus moved higher across all maturities, ending the month up 110 basis points at the three-year maturity, 83 basis points at the five-year maturity and 66 basis points at the 10-year maturity. According to preliminary, data Poland's year-on-year inflation rate continued to rise in October, with prices 6.8% higher than a year earlier. Prices in Poland have not risen at this rate for almost 20 years and are likely to show even higher price dynamics in the coming months. The rise is mainly due to higher oil prices, but the current energy crisis poses an upside risk to inflation everywhere. According to Bloomberg's October poll, Poland's GDP could grow by 5% in the third quarter. And fourth-quarter GDP growth was revised down slightly to 6% from 6.4%. The Purchasing Managers' Index rose to 53.8 points in October from 53.4 points in September, finishing above market expectations. Industrial production rose 8.8% in September, slightly above market expectations. As for the general government, the state generated a surplus of PLN 4,221 million in the ninth month, reducing the 12-month rolling budget deficit to 0.95% of GDP.
