

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

The fund is intended to serve as a stable, moderately low-risk form of investment, and to offer investors higher returns than bank deposits over the medium term. The portfolio elements are selected in accordance with the above principles. To ensure liquidity, the fund primarily aims to hold bonds and discount treasury bills issued by the State Debt Management Centre on behalf of the State of Hungary, as well as bonds issued by the National Bank of Hungary. The fund has a low risk profile, but its portfolio may also contain forint-denominated debt securities issued by banks and corporations, which are expected to yield a higher return than government securities. The fund may also keep its liquid assets in bank deposits. Besides this, the fund may hold a limited proportion of foreign-currency instruments in its portfolio, but only subject to the full hedging of currency risk.

Aegon Domestic Bond Fund must hold minimum 80% of its assets in HUF-denominated bonds issued by the members of European Economic Area.

MARKET SUMMARY

In November, the annualized inflation have risen above 7% despite the interest rate hike cycle. Price increases are likely to peak this month and then gradually start to decline from December. At the November policy meeting, the rate hike cycle continued, with a 30 basis point tightening, leaving the base rate currently at 2.1%. However, due to recent risks, the one-week deposit tender rate has again diverged from the base rate, rising to 2.9% by the end of the month. Thus, the effective rate increase for the month of November was 110 basis points. The Monetary Council also changed the interest rate corridor, raising the lower bound by 45 basis points and the upper bound by 105 basis points. In order to tighten interbank forint liquidity, the foreign exchange swap facility providing forint liquidity will be phased out, and a short-dated discount bond will be introduced on an ad hoc basis to preserve stability in the end-quarter swap market. To reduce inflation, the government also froze fuel prices for three months from 15 November, capping them at 480 forints. The forint's exchange rate against the euro has stabilized at around 365 following the weekly interest rate hikes. During the month, the yield curve moved higher due to the regional sell-off. Three-year yields ended the month up by 147 basis points, 5-year yields by 92 basis points and the 10-year yields by 45 basis points. Government bond buying continues, but the volume of weekly purchases fell below HUF 30 billion by the end of the month, so the target amount of weekly purchases is likely to be reduced in the end-quarter review. The government continues to hold a large stock of cash. Developed markets have not helped either, with news of a faster unwinding of US asset purchases, the market is already pricing in two US rate hikes next year.
