

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

The Fund aims to share in the returns of the Polish stock market, and to profit from Polish economic growth through stock prices and dividend income. In accordance with the risk characteristics of equity investments, the Fund qualifies as a high-risk investment. According to the Fund Manager's intentions, the bulk of the Fund's portfolio is made up of the shares of foreign companies issued through public offerings. The primary investment targets are the securities, traded on the stock exchange or about to be listed on the stock exchange, of companies that operate in Poland or that derive a significant portion of their revenues from Poland, or whose shares are listed on the Warsaw Stock Exchange. The Fund may also invest in equities of other Central and Eastern European companies (Austria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Russia, Romania and Turkey). When developing the portfolio, the shares determine the nature of the Fund, and thus the proportion of shares that can be held in the Fund at any given time may reach the prevailing legal maximum. The Fund holds more than 30% of its assets in currencies other than the local currency (HUF).

MARKET SUMMARY

November had some positive macro data for investors in the US. Although the number of new job openings continued to rise, year-on-year inflation continued to fall, from 7.9% to 7.7%. This is very positive because the US Federal Reserve will not stop raising interest rates until the inflation rate starts to fall. The Fed's next meeting was held in early November and, as expected, they decided to raise the Fed Funds rate by 75 basis points, to 4%.

Europe continues to suffer from war-induced austerity. According to the November sentiment report of the German economic research institute IFO, which is typically one of the best indicators of the German growth rate, the index rose from 75.6 to 77, but remains depressed. Despite the weak economic data and high inflation figures, the minutes of the ECB's October rate decision meeting suggest that we can expect a 50 or 75 basis point hike from policymakers in December.

In Hungary, inflation remains very high. According to official data from the KSH, inflation was 22.5% in November. The increase, like the previous month's, is a multi-year record. The MNB did not change its base rate during the month and the forint was surprisingly stable against the euro. It seems that Hungarian interest rates are now high enough to prevent the forint from weakening further. But of course, the most important factor for the forint in the short to medium term is whether or not Hungary will receive the EU funds.

The Polish stock market ended November with a strong rise, strongly outperforming most developed and emerging markets. The fund slightly underperformed its benchmark due to weaker performance in the mid-cap sector. Sectors that have been strongly sold-off in the recent period outperformed the index during the month, with shares of commodity-related companies and refiners outperforming the index, but consumer staples stocks also showed relative strength. The gaming sector had a strong rally in the autumn months, but we saw profit realisation during November. In November, we were overweight consumer staples and banks, while we were underweight clothing and telecoms. In November, the mid-cap sector remained overweight relative to the benchmark. On average, the fund had a total exposure 3% higher than the benchmark index.
