

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

The aim of the Fund is to create an investment portfolio through asset allocation between and within asset classes that achieves annualised capital growth for investors higher than the benchmark over a 3-year time horizon. The Fund seeks investment opportunities primarily in emerging markets. In order to realise the investment objectives, the asset groups in the Fund's portfolio may be freely varied without having to adhere to any predetermined risk profile.

The Fund is a "total return" fund, which can invest in several asset classes, i.e. instead of focusing on just one sub-sector of the money or capital market, it concentrates its investments within a combination of assets that promises the highest possible return at any given time. The Fund does not aim to track a fixed benchmark, nor does it adhere to a fixed equity-to-bond portfolio ratio, but seeks to vary this ratio within broad boundaries, with the composition of the portfolio changing dynamically in order to achieve the Fund's return target. The Fund's investments focus on emerging markets. The Fund primarily allocates its assets between emerging-market local currency government securities, hard currency government and corporate bonds, and equity markets, in accordance with the latest market expectations. The Fund may thus assume interest rate risk, currency risk, credit risk, as well as equity market risk. The Fund may take positions in other regions and markets (e.g. commodity markets) besides the emerging markets. The Fund hedges most of its currency positions, but it may also take open currency positions. In the interest of efficient portfolio design, the Fund may also assume forward and futures positions.

MARKET SUMMARY

November had some positive macro data for investors in the US. Although the number of new job openings continued to rise, year-on-year inflation continued to fall, from 7.9% to 7.7%. This is very positive because the US Federal Reserve will not stop raising interest rates until the inflation rate starts to fall. The Fed's next meeting was held in early November and, as expected, they decided to raise the Fed Funds rate by 75 basis points, to 4%.

Europe continues to suffer from war-induced austerity. According to the November sentiment report of the German economic research institute IFO, which is typically one of the best indicators of the German growth rate, the index rose from 75.6 to 77, but remains depressed. Despite the weak economic data and high inflation figures, the minutes of the ECB's October rate decision meeting suggest that we can expect a 50 or 75 basis point hike from policymakers in December.

In Hungary, inflation remains very high. According to official data from the KSH, inflation was 22.5% in November. The increase, like the previous month's, is a multi-year record. The MNB did not change its base rate during the month and the forint was stable against the euro. It seems that Hungarian interest rates are now high enough to prevent the forint from weakening further. But of course, the most important factor for the forint in the short to medium term is whether or not Hungary will receive the EU funds.

The fund achieved a positive return in November. On the bond side, the fund's interest rate risk remained at the 3 1 year level. During the month we bought euro-denominated Hungarian government and OTP bonds. In contrast, we sold the remaining Russian bonds, so there is no longer any Russian exposure in the fund. On the equity side, we sold OMV and bought OTP shares. With index futures purchases we increased the emerging market equity weight from underweight to neutral. On the FX side, we continue to hold long forint positions against the Czech koruna, Polish zloty and euro at 16%. We bought forints against the dollar, at the 395 level.
