MARKET SUMMARY

December saw some mixed movement in the Polish bond market. While there was some strengthening at the short end of the yield curve, the five and ten-year yields ended December 20 and 45 basis points higher. The Polish central bank did not change its interest rate conditions at its rate decision meeting in early December, and the base rate remains at 6.75%. The majority of the Monetary Council believes that this interest rate level is optimal and that inflation will move towards the central bank's target without a significant deterioration in economic stability. In the third quarter, year-on-year the Polish GDP growth was 3.6% and the Bloomberg consensus is for full-year growth is 4.7%. According to preliminary data the December inflation fell year-on-year, ending well below market expectations (17.4%) at 16.6%. The main reason for the moderation in inflation is that the pace of price increases has started to slow, with energy and fuel prices already declining slightly compared to the previous month. The Purchasing Managers' Index continued to rise, with the manufacturing index rising to 45.6 from 43.4 in the previous month. Some improvement is already seen in the index, but it is still below the 50 mark, as output and new orders are still declining due to the uncertain economic environment and high inflation. Industrial production grew by 4.6% in November, beating market expectations of 2%. As for public finances, the state generated a deficit of PLN 8,959 million in October, bringing the 12-month rolling budget deficit to 1.98% of GDP.
